How do I build a power outage preparedness checklist?

The first step in building your power outage preparedness checklist is understanding your personal electrical needs and how you'd live without them. This includes considering alternate plans for refrigerating medicines, using power-dependent medical devices, and staying warm or cool, depending on the season.

What do you need in a power outage?

In any power outage, you need to focus on your basic survival needs first: water, food, shelter, heat, and first aid. These are the foundation of your emergency plan (and here is also where most advice stops). Here's a quick rundown of what you need: Most people have a few days of food in their homes that they can live on if they have to.
